

The Big Red Tool

November, 2008 Volume 1, Issue 4

"Baaah!" Means "No"

OBAMA WINS!!*

With exit polls showing an insurmountable lead for Barack Obama, the McCain campaign decided to concede early. A campaign aide dialed a large-button phone for McCain, who offered his congratulations to Barack Obama.

The call, which came at 6:01 Tuesday morning, Eastern Standard Time, was a surprise to the Obama campaign. "Given how the polls have been tracking for the past few months, we didn't expect this call until at least 6:30, 6:35 at the latest," said an Obama advisor.

McCain advisor Bambi Woods explained the move, saying "We just felt it better to concede early, and spare real Americans the pain of having to wait. Plus, John was eager to take his Centrum Silver and hit the Early Bird Special at Denny's — two for one!!"

"These desperate times call for quick, decisive action," said President-elect Obama, who quickly moved to name his new cabinet.

The Obama transition team named William Ayers as Secretary of Homeland Security, Fidel Castro the Minister of Economic Affairs, and Hugo Chavez the Secretary of Labor. Billionaire George Soros will helm the Ministry of Political Re-education, and Cindy Sheehan will help launch the new, cabinet-level post of the Secretariat of Abolishing the Second Amendment.

The new ministry officials stated that they would implement a Four-Year Plan that will lead to agricultural collectivization, the eradication of Kulaks, the forced modernization of the South, purging conservatives from the AM-band of talk radio, and nationalization of all private property, beginning with the entire Hooters franchise.

In other news, the Democratic National Committee announced that the new administration will add several new cabinet- and sub-cabinet-level offices to the ballooning government bureaucracy, including a Department of LGBT Affairs, and will move the nation's capital to the Castro district of San Francisco.

TRAGEDY!!!

OBAMA DISAPPEARS: JOE BIDEN TO ASSUME PRESIDENCY

Americans experienced a mixture of sorrow, wonder, and awe today when government officials announced that Barack Obama had mysteriously vanished.

The tragedy was discovered when three women from his political team entered his room to roll the window shades back, but found Obama missing. Only a stained muslin sheet remained.

"We're not really sure what to make of this," said Obama advisor Sam Zelotes. "It's like his body has simply been carried away or something."

Obama was last seen at supper the previous night, taking a light meal of bread and grape juice.

"My last memory of him will be that moment when he realized that several of us didn't have enough to eat or drink. He tore up his piece of bread and shared it with us, and then poured some juice from his cup into each of ours," said friend Bart, frowning his brow. "He told me to remember him next time he was a bit short on drink."

Obama "backer" Hillary Clinton responded, under questioning, "I left the final dinner early to deposit a check and never saw him again. I have no idea what happened, and I wash my hands of this. See you in 2012."

President Biden promises to mark the date of Obama's disappearance with feasts, song, and solemn ceremonies. "It's usually February for that sort of thing. And, we'll probably name a boulevard after him."

REPUBLICANS SECEDE, FORM OWN COUNTRY

Following the Obama election victory, an angry Republican Party seceded to form its own nation, Palinstan. "My supporters and I need a place to call our own as we prepare for the Apocalypse," asserted Palinstanian First Citizen Sarah Palin.

Officials also note that all pigs are equal, but some are more equal than others.

Certain moral and ethical rules shall be enforced across Palinstan, according to Minister of Golden Undergarments Mitt Romney.

By law, all residents of Palinstan:

- Must carry concealed weapons at all times, even when naked;
- Are forbidden from applying lipstick to farm animals, even goats;
- If male, must pass multiple-choice "Jingoistic Vocabulary" exam and wear hair in "mullet" style;

- If female, must wear rimless glasses, thong panties, and pass a rigorous moose-gutting practicum.
- Must have all demons exorcised in order to gain full citizenship.

Furthermore, all copies of MS Word will come with "Palin," "Palinstan," and "Palistian" pre-loaded in the dictionary.

The Palinstanian economy will be based on the export of strip-mined coal and the import of Budweiser Select beer. The inaugural budget includes $6 billion in earmarks for cultural projects, including the construction of a NASCAR autodrome and Rush Limbaugh's "Excellence in Broadcasting Palinstan Central Command Studio." There will also be funds for youth obesity-enhancement training and the establishment of the National University of Southern Country Music (NUSCUM).

ALSO IN THIS ISSUE:

- p. 13: Liberal White Guilt Over Race Completely Erased
- p. 69: Supreme Court Justices Pine for "The Good Old Days" of 2000
- p. 666: Write-in Party Candidate Theodore Barrington Harden IX Garners Four Votes Nationwide: One Was From His Mom
- p. 667: Jay-Z's "99 Problems" New National Anthem

THE BIG RED TOOL SAYS THAT PEOPLE WHO DON'T VOTE WILL BE TEA-FRAGGED.

Contact us at:
thewestern.bigredtool@gmail.com

Or visit our website at http://www.bigredtool.com

Next Issue: Dec. 1

The Big Red Tool

November, 2008 Volume 1, Issue 4

"Baaah!" Means "No"

McCAIN WINS!!*

John McCain delivered his victory speech on Tuesday night, declaring, "My win tonight represents a victory for the common man who makes more than $250,000 per year. It'll take an 'ordinary Joe's' perspective to turn around the bunghole that is Washington, D.C.—a place I've called home for the past 30 years."

McCain pointed out that he and his wife, Cindy, lead their lives according to the same, simple virtues shared by the rest of Americans in the top 1% tax bracket."

McCain explained, "We never pay full price for Cindy's gold, silver, or diamonds. Our manservant picks them up from Overstock.com."

"Trust me, we spent way more on Vice President Palin's wardrobe," McCain said, as Cindy sipped Cristal while slowly caressing her twenty-one-and-a-half carat diamond toe ring.

Commenting on his family life, McCain described it as "absolutely normal, even plain. I fly home to Arizona from Washington twice a month on Cindy's jet to be with my family."

"I believe in the same basic American values as my father, the four-star admiral and former Commander-in-Chief of the US Pacific Fleet. That and wearing strawberry jam in my shoes."

McCain drew contrasts between himself and his

"elite-born, elite-raised, and elite trained" socialist rival, Barack Obama. "The Illinois Senator ran a fine campaign. But he fancies his arugula salads, and so is out of touch with middle America."

"My personal chef fixes me three squares a day — meat, potatoes, and gravy for me!" He added that all fourteen of the McCain residences were furnished at Wal-Mart.

McCain concluded his speech by saying "America needs an average, red-blooded, rictus-smiling, mind-bogglingly out of touch man like me in charge of the Sopwith Camels and Zeppelins when the Soviets attack."

BREAKING NEWS

The RNC announced that its remaining $14,000 in campaign funds will go to create "Rocky"-inspired art to memorialize the election.

Pieces will include a "Winking Palin" statue with "Finger Guns," to replace Rocky Balboa on the steps of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, an oil portrait of a shirtless McCain guzzling a half-dozen raw eggs the morning of the election, and a Leroy Neiman-esque rendering of bloodied John McCain knocking out a non-descript black boxer.

McCAIN VICTORY: ELECTION ANALYSIS

After running one of the most highly-polished, professional, well-managed, and disciplined campaigns in modern American history, McCain's victory came as no surprise to professional politicians. Still, analysts tried to understand the campaign's mavericky decisions, and place them into the context of the mainstream far-right American psyche.

Faux News contributor Juan Williams surmised that "average Americans wanted to vote for candidates just like them—erratic, emotional, unpredictable, white, and full of hateful anger. They just love this guy," he gushed.

Political strategist Karl Rove agreed, adding that Sarah Palin's radical, conservative religious views and her outspoken advocacy of banning books and teaching creationism in public schools "resonated well with a crucial demographic—those who also believe in casting out demons, snake handling, speaking in tongues, marrying one's sister, who heli-hunt, and who use slices of Wonder Bread as shoulder pads."

McCain advisor and Mensa High Priest Marilyn Chambers commented "I think a lot of Americans just felt bad for the guy and voted for him. I mean, what would McCain do if he lost? Just knock around aimlessly in his eight residences in Phoenix, Sedona, La Jolla, San Diego, Coronado Island, and Arlington, I guess. Or maybe he'd walk along the beach, strumming a banjo, playing 'Foggy Mountain Breakdown'."

"Plus, John McCain is unbelievably sexy," she continued, "I'd so tap that."

ALSO IN THIS ISSUE:

- p. 1: Joe Sixpack Misses Election—Too Drunk to Vote
- p. 3: The Unborn Baby of Governor Palin's 17-Year-Old Daughter Named Secretary of State
- p. 5: "Matlock" Named Official US Television Show
- p. 7: McCain Pushes Law to "Keep Those Damn Kids Off My Lawn"
- p. 9: Sarah Palin Pregnant. Drudge Report Claims Immaculate Conception.

JOE SIXPACK ADVISES OBAMA

What the heck does a guy like me gotta do to get elected??

How should I put this... More "Joe," less "Bro."

STILL THE WHITE HOUSE